MYSTERY IN DEATH OF WILLIAM A. HARTNETT

EX-PRESIDENT OF TEAMSTERS HAD UGLY WOUNDS—POLICE DETAIN SON.

To determine whether William A. Hartnett, son of No. 15, River street, South Boston, was murdered to-day as he lay asleep in his bedroom, the police of the Lawrence street station are holding every effort.

Dead, prone on the floor of his bedroom, fully dressed, with a great gash wound in his forehead, another wound in the back of the head, an evil ferocious look, and a look of terror on his face, William A. Hartnett, son of the late William A. Hartnett, was found by the police of the Lawrence street station on Monday morning.

Dr. McCormick, who has often met him from the house, was summoned. He saw at a glance that his services were not required, but he refused to write a death certificate.

Police Detail Son.
The police of the Lawrence street station were notified, and they took the body of the dead man, William A. Hartnett, aged twenty-eight years, to the station, where he is now detained until the result of the autopsy is held by Medical Examiner William A. Macdonald, his brother.

The son, who is a handsome agent for the "Mans" (Chicago) Club, said that he was not at home at the time of the death of his father. He said that he was not at home at the time of the death of his father. He said that he was not at home at the time of the death of his father.

ELIJAH WOOD DIES AT NEWTON HOME
Elijah W. Wood, a prominent citizen of West Newton, died today at his home after a brief illness. Mr. Wood was eighty years of age, and was born in Boston. He had been in Newton for many years, and was engaged in the hardware trade. He was a member of the Newton Free Will Baptist Church, and was a prominent member of the community.

SIX DEAD IN BLOODY SKIRMISH AT LODZ
LODZ, Russian Poland, Dec. 31.—Six persons were killed and many wounded in a bloody battle between the Russian army and the Polish insurgents. The battle took place near the town of Lodz, and was one of the most severe of the recent fighting in Poland.

Frightful Carnage When Huge Engine Flowed Through Crowded Cars of B. & O. Excursion Near Washington—More Than 40 Dead and 80 Injured in Wreck That Casts Whole City in Mourning.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 31.—Forty-five, possibly fifty, persons were killed and at least eighty injured in the wreck of a passenger train on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Terra Cotta, a suburban station four miles from this city, when a freight train telescoped two cars filled with happy people. The debris, in which fragments of bodies were mingled, was scattered for a quarter of a mile along the track.

An investigation, rigid and to be complete, the railroad officials declare, is now being made to determine the cause of the wreck, the result of which has thrown this whole city in mourning. The hearing is to be public. The state of the people's mind would permit of nothing else.

HEARTRENDING SCENES.
Never in the annals of railroad disasters have more heartrending scenes resulted than when last evening a huge engine drawing a train of empty cars dashed at great speed into well filled passenger coaches, mangle the forms of persons who sat a moment before had been chatting together happily, recounting their day's pleasures and eagerly anticipating their home-coming, and hurling them in all directions in gruesome heaps of moaning, struggling, dying humanity.

Never before in the history of the railroad have the scenes depicted to-day been so terrible in horror or pathos. The bodies of the dead and the mangled forms of the living were everywhere. The scene was one of the most terrible that has ever been witnessed in the history of the railroad.

ROCKEFELLER SEES ONLY GLOOM AHEAD FOR BUSINESS WORLD IN 1907

FIRST LONG INTERVIEW WITH HEAD OF THE GREATEST TRUST IN AMERICA

Head of Oil Trust Gives His Longest and Most Remarkable Interview—Tells How Standard Oil Was Formed and Points to Shrinkage in Stock Values as a Moral.

THE following, sent out by the Publishers' Press, is the first long interview ever given by John D. Rockefeller for publication.

In this long talk the Standard Oil chief discusses his past life and foregoes, with some, the business conditions of 1907.

He apparently assumes that the height of the great wave of prosperity is passed and that harder times have already set in.

The head of the connected Standard Oil Company declares that attacks upon "corporate interests" have caused the year's shrinkage in stock values.

Two interviews more interesting than this have never been published. It should be read by every person who is concerned in the present industrial changes through which the world is passing.

Copyrighted by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—In an interview granted Master E. Fox, of the Newspaper Enterprise Association, John D. Rockefeller spoke as follows:

"In making inventories for the year just ending, a great many business men in this country will find that they have suffered a loss amounting to millions of dollars through shrinkage in the value of their shareholdings during the twelve months just past.

"This is in the face of our great prosperity, the greatest era of prosperity in the history of our country."

"Why should stock values be lower to-day than they were a year ago?"

"I can only account for it by the attacks that have been made upon corporate interests during the last year or two—unprovoked attacks that go to tear down the structures that have been reared by our people through great effort, energy and patience.

"The effect of these attacks was, of course, first felt by capitalists, and then, through them, the effect was felt by the labor class.

"The labor class are feeling the effect more than ever now.

"Who will be the next to suffer?"

Workingmen Will Suffer Most.

"Why, the man with the dinner pail—the workman, whose wages are now higher than ever before in our history; twenty per cent. higher, I believe the statistics say, than they were five or six years ago.

"When stock values are depreciated, as at present, capitalists naturally begin to take in their loans, dispose of their collateral and then the debtor classes feel the pressure.

"When the debtor classes feel the pressure, then it is the workingman who suffers. I believe January inventories will be a surprise to many people.

"You have asked me for my opinion of the business prospects for the forthcoming year. I have never done much prophesying. I have never considered that profitable, and I guess I had better not begin now.

"I will say, though, that I have great faith in the American people. I have great faith in the honesty and integrity of our business men. The great majority are good, honest, hard working and enterprising men. I have great faith in their judgment.

"It has always been pleasant to look forward to a new year, in which prosperity, success and blessing may be continued and increased. I sincerely hope that this country of ours—'Old Mother'—will continue in 1907 and in the years that are to come."

Spoke Guardedly and Deliberately.

These are the words of John D. Rockefeller. Coming at the opening of the new year, at a time when the whole world looks toward him for some indication of success in commerce and trade coming at a time when the whole structure of the administration at Washington is supposed to be directed against Mr. Rockefeller's gigantic oil trust and when state governments are trying to disrupt the monopoly, it is perhaps the most extraordinary public statement ever made by the founder of the Standard Oil Company.

Guarded in his every utterance, speaking always with deliberation, sometimes with a soft earnestness, and again with intense earnestness, these words of Mr. Rockefeller's entire conversation with the writer, which was of nearly three hours duration, a note of indignation, which, though voiced, was unmistakable—indignation at the political attitude of antagonistic corporate enemies.

Mr. Rockefeller's broadest declaration has been quoted above. He made no reference to President Taft or his administration as did so many mention the name of the Standard Oil Company. He did say that the shrinkage in the value of one's shareholdings would be shown by the January inventory to amount to "several millions of dollars." This was said calmly, without emotion, and in the tone of voice that the average business man might speak of a minor failure or a temporary disappointment in his affairs.

Never Felt Better in His Life.

It was just noon when the interview arrived at the magnificent Rockefeller estate at Pocantico, twenty miles over the Blue Hills from downtown New York. The workman, most of them Italians, were at lunch in their lodges.

Mr. Rockefeller was playing golf with a party of friends.

Mr. Rockefeller was joined by Father Patrick Lannon, a handsome young Catholic priest of the "farther shore," of whom the millionaire said he was very fond and praised highly for his devotion to the community and for his integrity.

"Really, I don't remember of having felt better in my whole life than I do to-day," he said.

"God's great blessings, pure air and bright sunshine are all about us, and certainly we have much to be thankful for, have we not?"

The Rockefeller lodge at Pocantico was a comparatively small and plain frame structure, almost entirely surrounded by a glass-enclosed sun parlor.

There is absolutely nothing about the place to indicate the enormous wealth of its possessor.

The hospitable, light-colored wall paper in the large reception room and the living room was relieved by a few etchings and prints. There were no paintings.

There were a few books, religious or standard novels, on the sitting room table, and one or two magazines with articles referring to the matter of the house, marked in blue pencil.

"Things Used to Be Very Different."

A heavy Bible has a place in the corner of the room.

The reverie of the writer upon the little simplicity of the life of the most widely discussed man in the world was greatly interrupted by Mr. Rockefeller.

"It is a clock and we are all ready for lunch, I am sure," he said, and led the way to a pretty dining room where seven were laid for four on a square dining table, amply heaped with fruits, nuts and wafers.

A maid brought this dinner from the kitchen and handed them to "John," who served the meal.

Mr. Rockefeller lingered long over his soup, though he ate little of it. He lived at the almshouse and waited patients and said of them that he had learned of their intricate qualities from a gentleman in California, who are no doubt and who shared entirely upon vegetables and fruits.

"You want me to tell you what I use in this country in 1907?"

Mr. Rockefeller paused for a minute or so. He sat with his hands clasped in a characteristic attitude and while "John" was helping the plates with meat and baked wafers, French peas and hazel nut delicacies, Mr. Rockefeller began the remarkable statement, the purpose of which is quoted above.

"Things used to be very different in the country," he said.

"Under the old system a joint interview with it in a partnership for mutual benefit. Sometimes those partnerships were agreeable and profitable, but frequently they did not continue very long.

"In the old days competition was severe, and there was much unnecessary waste of material and effort.

Consolidated for Economy's Sake.

"After a while it became apparent to thoughtful business men that the best way to accomplish an efficient system of business was to consolidate interests. For years now interests have been consolidated, and we have our great corporations as the result.

"Somehow I look back upon the time in Cleveland when I was starting my business line. I remember that my first employer in Cleveland used to get a tin for frolicking over the city of Marquette country over the Great Lakes to Cleveland. No one complained about rates at that time.

"But later, when I was associated with a party of gentlemen who had consolidated these interests and we were shipping our ore the same route from Marquette to Cleveland for cents a ton, I was called a wicked monopolist."

Mr. Rockefeller smiled at the form.

"But you see what the consolidation of interests has accomplished. They used to think that a large ship with a thousand tons capacity was the best for the purpose. After the consolidation of interests and when economies were strictly regarded we realized that the 2,000-ton ship was wanted, and we ordered our ships to 2,000 tons, 2,000 tons, 2,000 tons, 2,000 tons, and the ore ships of today, I am told, carry as high as 10,000 tons of ore.

Asked Competitors to Come In.

"When we started to establish our oil business in Cleveland we were more here. I was better treated than I am now. I think I was a bit of a monopolist, but my competitors and me said to them: 'There is a great loss to our business. It is not good, and there is no prospect of getting any better under the present system. Your business is at a standstill as well as ours. Now, we have an idea that we believe will operate for our mutual advantage. We want to join our interests with yours, and yours with ours. You will take your junk pile and give you a stake in our company, or we will pay you upon an equitable appraisal of your property.'

"Well, do you know that each of these men, and some of them refused."

to take the money. Those who sold out to us did not believe in our idea. Now they are the ones who attack us.

"They attack us because of their mistakes.

"They say we are illiberal and proud, because they were not wise enough to see that joining interests would be proper economy.

"Those men who made that mistake have gone around abusing me, but I take pleasure in knowing that I did what was right and fair and for the best interests of that business. I gave them the same opportunity for success that I had. They did not accept it, and that was a hard mistake.

"Prosperity Due to Wise Judgment."

"American corporations have done much good for the people. It is a serious mistake to attempt to tear them down and return to the old idea, which made business for all as a hard struggle. Failures of newly established businesses must be. If my revolution, serves me correctly, between 70 and 75 per cent. That has been greatly reduced. Failures are few and few these days.

"The prosperity that we have been enjoying is due to the strict economy and wise judgment of our business men.

"I think that the lower section of New York City (the financial district) holds some of the finest men of the world.

"As a class they are intelligent, well educated men, with a sense of honor and integrity. There are exceptions, of course, but I have found none of these men as true as these."

"It is a great fact that in these days of vast wealth, when men can acquire large fortunes they are not spoiled by it. These men go on working, using of their money, they do not foolishly squander their money or they risk themselves in excess. They continue to live simply and work hard and preserve the honest habits of honest men.

"My, sometimes I lie in bed and think back of the good men I have been associated with in my life and sometimes I am ashamed that I have not said more in praise of them. There were sixty of us in the beginning and now all but four have gone on to the other life. Just think of it, only four left.

"Only four of us left," he went on, "and isn't it strange that our business is not being annihilated by some of the men who were at one time our antagonists in the hard days when we well nigh lost to these men? They are running our business for us, and are enriched thereby."

"Why, the old boys of the old days are now conducting departments of our business. They have grown up in it, and they are doing it."

"It is one of the greatest satisfactions of my life that I have succeeded in associating myself with good men."

"Be Honest and Keep a Clear Conscience."

"When twelve years ago I left my business forever, I still had other interests to occupy my time. These other interests have something to do with the general good of our country, and my days are all too short to attend to these matters."

"Golf is a diversion and keeps my health substantial. I feel that many men in business today are making a mistake in that they do not avail themselves of regular and reasonable exercise."

"My advice to a young man at the opening of this new year is to go straight ahead and do the best you can to make a success for yourself and keep happy and comfortable those who depend upon you."

"If you make mistakes, remember that it is human to err, but try again and try harder."

"Above all things be honest, honest with yourself and with those with whom you associate, with in my life and sometimes I am ashamed that I have not said more in praise of them. There were sixty of us in the beginning and now all but four have gone on to the other life. Just think of it, only four left."

"If you fall at the end you will at least have a clear conscience and a clear mind, a greater comfort and worth than a fortune gained by dishonest methods."

"If you fall at the end you will at least have a clear conscience and a clear mind, a greater comfort and worth than a fortune gained by dishonest methods."

GOD-GOODS AND MORAN THE FEARFUL PROBE

In City Affairs the publication of the Good Government Association of Boston, issued today, Boston Attorney John B. Moran is named for the part he has taken in the exposure of the Fenway graft scandal.

Mr. Moran has made good in the official statement. The article follows:

"The Fenway & the District Attorney gave out the result of his investigation into the Fenway contract of $100,000."

Mr. Moran has been accused many times of undertaking all kinds of tasks without result, but now he has shown that he is not to be taken for granted.

From his long and arduous investigation he has now come forth with a report which is the most complete and accurate of the situation since it was first made public.

The investigation of the Fenway contract was a task of great magnitude, and Mr. Moran has shown that he is not to be taken for granted.

"It is a serious mistake to tear up corporations (Trusts) and return to the old idea. Wall street has some of the finest men in the world. Many of the rich men are not spoiled, they go on working and die in the harness. They perform the honest duties of honest men."

SCENE AT TONOPAH WHILE FIGHT ARENA WAS BEING BUILT AND JOE GANS IN A SERIOUS MOOD

JEFF TO MEET FIVE MEN AT TONOPAH

TONOPAH, Nev., Dec. 31.—Mike Riley has taken the ropes. The Tonopah promoter, with blood in his eyes, has declared that Tonopah will be the fight center of not only Nevada but the whole country, and with this idea uppermost in his mind, Riley is out with the announcement that he is going to pull off a fight central in the spring that will eclipse anything of the kind ever attempted. And that is not all. The purpose for this same central will aggregate $100,000.

The big card for this springtime show at J. J. Jeffries has had a reputation for the last few years. Riley has had a reputation for the last few years. DUMORS OF FAIR FIGHT MAKE JOE GANS ANGRY

By Boston American Special Writer.
TONOPAH, Nev., Dec. 31.—On the matter of the fight between Joe Gans, the negro lightweight pugilist, and Kid Herman of Chicago the question is not how much the promoters make by the venture, but how much will they lose. That there will be a serious loss on the sale of receipts and the $25,000 purse alone is the opinion of the writer, although the match-makers are hopeful that the box office accumulations will amount to sufficient, and the cost of the new venture, add to the cost of the new venture, add to the cost of the new venture.

RHODES LEE MEET PART AT THORNTON SWIMMERS AT HARVARD WILL BEGIN TRAINING

One of the best boxing men ever seen in Little Italy will be seen at Thornton tonight at Mike Riley's club, which is only a little way out of Providence. The attraction is Billy Rhodes of Kansas and Terry Martin of Philadelphia, a couple of the hardest hitting weightweights in the game. Rhodes who has been up against the toughest kind of game and yet have good records.

They have been in training a long time as the best was supposed to be. Rhodes has been in training a long time as the best was supposed to be. Rhodes has been in training a long time as the best was supposed to be.

POLICE WARN MOTORISTS TO GO EASY ON SUNDAYS

By J. C. KERRISON.
The automobile career was by no means exempt from the surveillance of the police. The blue-coated guardians of the peace and Boston laws included the automobile in their list of offenders, making a visit to each of the garage and motor of the city on Sunday.
